With the death of Huey P. Long yesterday from an assassin's bullet, there passed from the American stage a strange but powerful figure.

It is characteristic of this country that it can be depended upon at certain intervals to give birth to some man, who, for a time, wields an uncanny and inexplicable influence upon great numbers of people. Their advent, like his, in the political sphere, is usually contemporaneous with disturbed political conditions, and when times become normal they sink into obscurity, lose their following and fade out of the picture as far as their ability to sway the masses is concerned.

DIFFERENT PATTERN

Long, however, did not follow the pattern as we have seen and known it, but was unique in many ways. Like all his predecessors, however, he had a supposed panacea for our economic ills, but there has been no man of his type who ever succeeded in investing himself with such autocratic powers as he exercised in Louisiana. That State in effect had been reduced to a condition of vassalage. He was king there and king with a capital K. In fact he had more than kingly attributes; they were autocratic and he wielded that one-man power according to his own sweet will; whether for good or ill, only history will tell.

NATIONAL FIGURE

His influence, however, was not limited by the geographical boundaries of his home State, but reached high in national affairs. He was a poisonous thorn in the side of the Democratic national administration, which he attacked in and out of season, and with such effect that he had the lead.

E. C. Council In Dare Vote Over Permits

EL CERRITO, Sept. 10. Despite the dare of Councilman Peter Larsen at the meeting of the council this evening, a soft drink and dance permit was granted to J. Isola for the Hollywood club, 204 San Pablo avenue, by the vote of three to two.

When the application came up, Councilman Ralph Beck, who had cast a negative vote a week ago, stated that he had made an investigation, found the applicant a person of good reputation, a resident and taxpayer of the city. As the council had granted similar permits to outsiders he was in favor of granting the application of Isola.

Councilman Larsen said he had no particular objection to the applicant but behind the scenes was chin hing, and so far as he was concerned Hing was simply out of luck.

Larsen asserted the granting of the permits would split the whole town wide open, and he dared the members to take favorable action.

The dare was taken up by Beck making the motion to grant the permits, seconded by Navellier, and when the roll was called, the vote was three ayes and two noes.

Here is the vote:
For the permits: Beck, Nissen and Navellier.
Against the permits: Huber and Larsen.

Slain Senator

Long Death Removes Enemy Of New Deal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10. UP—Violent death today removed from the American scene and the 1935 campaign the most extraordinary political genius of our times.

Senator Huey P. Long was shot down in full stride of a career which gave him unmatched power over one State, which promised to add other States to his regime, and which might have led the Louisiana bill to the White House.

He had marked Arkansas and Mississippi for his own. He was reaching farther. For the nation at large he had shared our wealth, an economic cure-all which gave the more substantial elements of the community acute jitters and afflicted economists with spots before the eyes and some of the symptoms of hysteria.

But "share our wealth" was powerful political medicine. President Roosevelt was impelled last June to spring on Congress and the country a tax-the-rich bill which seemed designed to counteract some of the Senator's influence. And his plans for a Southern political hegemony were sufficiently tangible to compel the New Deal finally to welcome and reward Senator Theodore (the man) Bilbo on the practical theory that he was about the only mortal who could out-Huey and thereby keep Mississippi in the New Deal camp in 1936.

NO CONGRESSIONAL PROBE
A suggestion that a congressional investigation seek to discover "who instigated" Long's death came close today upon his passing. Representative Clare Fennerty, Republican, Pennsylvania, raised that question in a brief statement which inferred that some organized movement was behind the man who pulled the trigger on the Kingfish. The Capital does not see it that way.

Long publicly avowed his fear of assassination. That many a Louisianan desired his death is not unlikely. But for lack of sub-

LOUISIANA IN TURMOIL OVER DEATH

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10. UP—Death came today to Huey P. Long from gun fire which blazed from hatred of his political creed.

Builder of a career without parallel in American history, Long was shot at 5:20 p. m. Sunday by Dr. Carl Austin Weiss, who is now Long's political dictatorship. Weiss was killed immediately by Long's bodyguard. Long died today at 4:10 a. m.

CHAOS FEARED
The assassination brought fear of chaos to much of Louisiana. It left Long's powerful political machine without a pilot, subject to the vagaries of an uncertain public opinion.

The amazing dictator will be buried on the State House grounds with a simple marble slab to mark his resting place. The State House itself, beautiful 33-story skyscraper will be his monument.

WIFE PRESENT
He died in the dark hours of the dawn. Before he drifted into unconsciousness, he mumbled prayer of resignation, a regret he could not live to carry on his program, a last thought for the many students he had befriended.

The wife, who is pretty Rose McConnell Long, is reported with a broken heart when he was a salesman. (Continued on Page Five)

Torres May Get Sanity Hearing In Murder Case

MARTINEZ, Sept. 10. Arriving in Martinez today, Sept. 10, was the radio murder confessor, subject to be held in the court of Judge A. F. Bray was delayed one week today by the court with the object of giving Torres a sanity hearing.

Apparition for the defendant, A. Torres, T. M. Carlson and Robert Collins of Richmond and Frances Collins of Crockett, told the court that they believed Torres was sane.

Judge Bray then decided to delay the case a week, in order that he might determine whether it was possible for him to order a sanity hearing for Torres.

Torres is charged with the murder of Aurelio Cabrera, 30, Mexican section hand who was shot, killed, and thrown into the bay near Port Costa on May 20.

Held at the county jail since the murder, Torres has gone on two hunger strikes.

High School Board To Act On Purchase Of E. C. Site

Action on the purchase of a site in El Cerrito for a new public high school was taken yesterday afternoon by the board of trustees of the Richmond Union High School.

Acting on a motion of Trustee Robert Scott, the board named W. T. Helms, city superintendent of schools and clerk of the board to meet with the owners of the El Cerrito tract in El Cerrito to select the best site possible in the 30-acre tract. Helms will report back at the next meeting.

PROJECT IS HALTED
Helms reported that since the SPCA has been abandoned, work on the Roosevelt junior high school had been halted. The board then decided to give Elmer Free, local contractor who is now preparing the job, a "vacation" until work on the building is resumed.

At the same time Helms was asked to confer with WPA officials in San Francisco in regard to a WPA project for the school. It is understood that the WPA will grant an outright gift of the building.

Scout Leaders Preparing For Show, Camporall

Two of the outstanding events of the fall for Richmond Boy Scouts will be held at El Cerrito. The "Camporall" and "Show" will be given by the El Cerrito Scout Council.

The first event will be the "Show" which will be held at the El Cerrito High School on September 14. The "Camporall" will be held at the El Cerrito Scout Camp on September 15.

On October 12, at 11 a. m., the "Camporall" will be held at the El Cerrito Scout Camp. The "Show" will be held at the El Cerrito High School on October 13.

Joseph Miller, president of the El Cerrito Scout Council, said that the "Camporall" and "Show" will be a big success.

TOT STRUCK BY MACHINE IS KILLED

MARTINEZ, Sept. 10. Two more lives were added to the auto death toll of the county today when the total up to 24 since January 1, 1935.

One of the victims was Ruby May Clements, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Clements of the Davis auto camp, Brentwood, who was fatally hurt when she was struck by a car operated by Orin Blackman, 18, Oakley, as she was returning home from school.

The second was an unidentified man, 60, fatally injured while riding in a car driven by Jack Cheza, 18, Miner avenue, Stockton.

The stranger was an itinerant who had been picked up by Cheza and was riding in the rumble seat. In making a turn onto the Old River bridge, Cheza lost control, and the car struck the bridge. The stranger was violently thrown out of the car and landed on one side. He was immediately taken to Antioch and was dead when a doctor was summoned. He had died of internal injuries.

An investigation of the Clements child's death by Deputy Sheriff Al Davies, showed that the tot made a dash across the street in order to be with some of her friends, when she was struck by the door of the car. Death was almost instantaneous.

Invitations Pour In On City Solons

It was invitation and acceptance night at the meeting of the Richmond city council last evening. The city fathers were deluged with bids to go either "and you," and they gamely accepted, with the result that their social and business calendars will be crowded for some time to come.

A last minute invitation was issued by Mayor Scott to members to attend the Constitution Day exercises being held by the LRS, and listen to City Attorney Tom Carlson discuss that historic document.

EXPOSITION DAY

Saturday, September 28 will be Alameda and Contra Costa Counties Day at the San Diego Exposition and the Oakland Chamber of Commerce in a communication expressed the hope that it would be one big occasion. To bring about such a result it was urged that the mayor appoint a large and representative delegation from this city. The mayor expressed himself as being in entire sympathy with the plan and said he would make his appointments public within the next few days.

Richmond Post No. 10, American Legion urged the councilmen.

"SERVES ME RIGHT"
PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 10.—UP—Before he died today from a bullet wound inflicted September 3, A. H. Caviness, 46, said: "I got what was coming to me. Suspect Not Identified, To Quizers Satisfaction

MARTINEZ, Sept. 10. With a charge of kidnaping pending against R. E. Gibson in the court of Justice of the Peace Ed Jackson at Concord, the Piedmont grand jury today took up the case and after hearing the testimony of witnesses refused to return an indictment.

The defendant in the case, who was arrested at Oakland today, stood on his constitutional rights, and refused to testify, as he had not consulted with an attorney. Gibson is being held at the county jail in default of bail.

Other names were R. Schuler and R. J. Barrett, guards at the Avon refinery of the Associated Oil company and George Shad, Southern Pacific station agent at Avon.

The case is an aftermath of the strike at the Associated Oil company the middle of this year, and the incident on which the kidnaping case is based took place on May 11.

It was at that time that R. E. Gibson, who was employed on a tanker and while it was at San Pedro, called for Avon and left him behind. Wilson made his way northward, and arriving at Avon, went into the Southern Pacific station and asked the agent, Shad, how he could get into the refinery.

While Shad was called to the window to sell a ticket, three men entered, took forcible possession of Wilson, threw him into an automobile, drove him to San Francisco, where, it is said, they attempted to gain information from him, and in a short time gave him 25 cents and turned him loose.

The station agent saw the men, and the guards who were some distance away, also saw the alleged kidnaping.

At the grand jury session tonight, neither of the guards was able to identify Gibson, as one of the three men who kidnaped Wilson.

The case will now have to be handled in the ordinary way by the holding of a preliminary examination.

The witnesses were interrogated by Deputy District Attorney Rex Boyer.

Oaklander Held In Cafe Brawl

Charged with assault with a deadly weapon, Teddy O'Hara, of Oakland, was arrested at the State parole office in San Francisco yesterday for El Cerrito police.

O'Hara, who is said to be a parolee convict, was arrested on the complaint of Charles F. Birch, 64, Ninth street, Richmond, as the result of a brawl at an El Cerrito cafe early Sunday morning.

Birch was treated at a local hospital for cuts on his head allegedly inflicted by O'Hara.

O'Hara is now in the El Cerrito city jail. He will appear before Police Judge A. G. Thompson this evening.

MUSSOLINI TO MOBILIZE 20,000,000

ROME, Sept. 10. UP—War between Ethiopia and Italy between September 20 and 25 was forecast by diplomats tonight on the basis of reports Benito Mussolini would order a mobilization of 20,000,000 Fascist men and boys at that time.

The mobilization, embracing party members from boyhood to senility wherever the Italian flag flies, was announced today in an order from Il Duce. Only telegraph operators, public service employees and street car conductors will be exempt when drums, bugles, bells and sirens sound the summons to arms.

BROADCAST SPEECH

Mussolini, it was learned late tonight, will seize the dramatic occasion for a speech to be broadcast around the world.

SEE PEACE FAILURE

The entire "show" is expected to coincide with the first march of Italian troops into Ethiopia.

In order however to reflect a belief that the Geneva peace negotiations will fail, Mussolini today laid the groundwork for this gigantic assembly.

From schools, factories and homes the herds of uniformed Fascism will stream to barracks. (Continued on page 8.)

$14 'Phone Bill Brings Drunk Grief

Lloyd Marshall, local manager of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company is noted for being one of the best natured men in Richmond slow to anger and plenteous in mercy.

However, there is such a thing as pressing the limit, and that was just what happened yesterday with the result that the milk of human kindness in Mr. Marshall's system was drained entirely dry and he went out on the warpath.

A man in a West Side cafe, having imbibed freely of the cup that cheers, felt at peace with the world. His memory, however, was fogged by his alcoholic beverage, and the next step was to call a friend in Baltimore on Mr. B's invention, which chanced to be in a handy spot on the cafe wall. He got the friend's name and there ended the episode.

San Jose Jail Delivery Plot Nipped By Cops

SAN JOSE, Sept. 10.—UP—A wholesale delivery of 80 Santa Clara county jail prisoners was believed averted today with confinement of four men following discovery of a quantity of hack saw blades in the jail.

Sheriff George Lyle and night jailer, Henry Liston, discovered plans for the purported jail break last night, giving no indication of their find, they waited until they caught John Timon, Robert Watson, Lynn Wade and Joseph Burgess in the act of attempting to force their way from their cell.

11 ARRESTED IN ATTACK ON U. S. OFFICER

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 10.—UP—Arrest of 11 men who are alleged to have led a farmers mob which assaulted United States Marshal Henry B. Dillingham at Plattsmouth last month was announced today by Federal officials.

The announcement came as a Federal grand jury prepared to report on its findings in a special hearing on charges against the men.

The arrests were believed to indicate that several indictments will be returned. The farmers were charged with obstructing a government officer.

WERE MANHANDLED

Dillingham and three deputies were manhandled last August 17 when they attempted to conduct a mortgage foreclosure sale of the Sam Dillibiss farm at Plattsmouth.

Dillingham was acting as special master for the Federal court of Judge Merrill E. Otis, who later called the present grand jury.

The arrests were made in the corridor of the Federal building where the men were waiting to appear before the grand jury.

Under "contempt" citations they were lodged in the county jail pending an appearance before Otis tomorrow morning. The contempt citation charged them with having:

"Attacked, battered, overpowered and arrested Henry L. Dillingham, United States marshal, Robert Pulliam, George Colburn and E. E. Fisher" and also alleged that they "disarmed and robbed Colburn and Fisher of their pistols."

Those arrested were Harrison N. Jones and Dan Stoffel, Cameron J. D. Pipes, Hemple Homer Crowley and Randall T. Arnold, Lathrop, Frank Hixon, Gower, Charles Anderson, Starfield, and A. A. Holman. Marion Arnold, Ivan Diviliss and A. P. Frige, all of Plattsmouth, were also arrested. Diviliss is believed to be a nephew of Sam Dillibiss, whose farm was scheduled to be sold by the government officials.

EATON, Ohio.—UP—A goat on the farm of M. E. Woolery was the only survivor of a livestock tragedy that accompanied a sudden flood in Twin creek. The animal climbed into the branches of a flowering tree and hung on until receding water left it stranded in a pool.

The election was called by the Council on the basis of a resolution passed by the freeholders at their meeting on Tuesday, October 22, 1935, at 7 p. m.

Additional gas tax money for the improvement of Cutting boulevard will not be available until after the first of the year according to the report made to the Council by Street Commissioner W. F. Huber.

Huber said the only way the work could be done now would be to use the $5,000 allotted the city from the $100,000 bond issue and borrow about $100,000 to pay the difference in the cost of the improvement.

The city would be reimbursed for the $100,000 from tax money in January.

No action on doing the work will be taken until after the city Engineer H. D. Chapman returns from his vacation.

Under the contract to be entered into the Humane Society will receive $15 per week and turn all fees collected into the city.

The vote on the two motions, 4-2, was 4-2.

SLAYER'S PAL FAMED ALASKA IS GIVEN TERM PUBLISHER IS AT SAN QUENTIN DEAD IN NORTH

STOCKTON, Sept. 10.—UP—Milton Ragsdale, 26, recently arrested in Salt Lake City, Utah, today was sentenced to San Quentin prison following his plea of guilty to first degree robbery charges.

Ragsdale confessed to entering a local saloon, gambling establishment July 22 with three companions, and taking $1,200 from the place and patrons in it at the time.

Judge D. M. Young gave him an indeterminate sentence.

Ragsdale was arrested with Frank Melonas, 19, who was found dying in the rear of an automobile from gunshot wounds. He later told officers that Melonas, Clyde Johnson and Robert Miller were his companions in the Lodi hold-up.

Johnson was lynched August 5 near Yreka, Cal., for the killing of Police Chief P. R. Daw of Dunsmuir. Miller escaped, and now is the object of a wide-spread search.

Ragsdale also confessed, officers said, to robbing a postoffice at Cordella, Cal. July 5 with Melonas, Miller and Johnson.

Melonas was shot during burglary of a service station at Sharnberg, Texas, and Ragsdale received a bullet wound in the same battle. Melonas died of his wounds.

SLAYER'S PAL FAMED ALASKA IS GIVEN TERM PUBLISHER IS AT SAN QUENTIN DEAD IN NORTH

STOCKTON, Sept. 10.—UP—Milton Ragsdale, 26, recently arrested in Salt Lake City, Utah, today was sentenced to San Quentin prison following his plea of guilty to first degree robbery charges.

Ragsdale confessed to entering a local saloon, gambling establishment July 22 with three companions, and taking $1,200 from the place and patrons in it at the time.

Judge D. M. Young gave him an indeterminate sentence.

Ragsdale was arrested with Frank Melonas, 19, who was found dying in the rear of an automobile from gunshot wounds. He later told officers that Melonas, Clyde Johnson and Robert Miller were his companions in the Lodi hold-up.

Johnson was lynched August 5 near Yreka, Cal., for the killing of Police Chief P. R. Daw of Dunsmuir. Miller escaped, and now is the object of a wide-spread search.

Ragsdale also confessed, officers said, to robbing a postoffice at Cordella, Cal. July 5 with Melonas, Miller and Johnson.

Melonas was shot during burglary of a service station at Sharnberg, Texas, and Ragsdale received a bullet wound in the same battle. Melonas died of his wounds.

Long's death does not mean that Mr. Roosevelt is in again nor that the Republicans must remain out. But the New Deal path is considerably clearer today than a week ago when the Kingfish was ready to rampage through the country, demanding the heads of a brace or so of Democratic senate bigwigs and consolidating the forces of "Share our Wealth" scattered through the country in club groups which accepted the Senator's word as the first modern revelation of the Bible. Homesickness Very Often Complicates Illness To Serious Proportions

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

IN THE treatment of sick people the doctor encounters a vast number of conditions in his patients that have no relation to the disease, but go a long way in the determination of the outcome. One of these which is perhaps the hardest to recognize and combat is homesickness, or nostalgia. Particularly is this true in patients who are taken sick while away from home, or by the nature of their illness are compelled to be taken to hospital. We are prone to laugh at those who, while on a visit to strange places, suddenly lose all interest in their visit and decide that they must go home. It may be funny to the outsider, but is a very serious matter to the individual so afflicted. When a person is sick and this complication of homesickness comes on, it frequently becomes a very serious matter. I haven't much doubt that many deaths can be attributed to this complication. What it is, nobody seems to know, even animals suffer from it, and children as well as many very worldly-wise adults. Vacationists, soldiers in the field, travelers, even when physically well, often become seriously sick because of some unexplainable reason. This aching desire for the home fireside!—though in outward appearance and convenience it is far inferior to their present surroundings.

Speaks of Spanish-American War

One of my first experiences with homesickness in a large group, was in the Spanish-American War. Those who have read of that time know that the preparation for this war was very hurried and inadequate. Many young and older men volunteered and were taken to the camps.

We soon read a great deal about the vast amount of sickness and the many deaths in the camps. The home folks were up in arms about it. In one camp in Florida many were incapacitated because of illness. The Governor of the state from whence the troops came asked permission to bring to the seriously ill home. He sent a train of nineteen Pullman cars, equipped with doctors, nurses, food, clothing, and luxuries to the camp.

We did find the camp in bad shape. We loaded our cars with these considered seriously sick, all of whom had to be carried to the train. Each man received a full outfit of clean underwear, and bedding, and was given good food. By the time we left the state of Florida one-half of the men were up and around the train, and by the time we reached our home-state, only three patients were bed ridden, and they were suffering from typhoid fever.

Poor food, poor sanitation, and discouragement to be sure, but homesickness was the real disease those men were suffering from. Their State took them home, nature did the rest.

Retards the Recovery

I find homesickness retarding the recovery of many patients. Last spring, a patient, a woman with three small children at home, was compelled to be in the hospital for a considerable time.

She improved steadily for two weeks, then she commenced to lag; became feverish, lost her appetite, did not want anything, just wanted to be let alone. No physical cause could be found, but she was fading away. When asked if she was homesick, she said she guessed not, didn't know what it was like. She had had previous hospital experience.

I became quite worried and, on a hunch, decided to take her home. Hospital authorities protested that she was too sick. Her children, at home, were suffering from mumps and that didn't look so good. Something had to be done, so she was moved back home. After she was placed in bed, the children were allowed to come to the door of her bedroom and say hello, and throw her kisses.

She smiled for the first time in weeks. Within twenty-four hours her temperature was normal and she asked for food. Homesickness! Recovery was rapid and complete. The prescription of "Home" was absolutely successful.

Sometimes the patient complains of homesickness and we can, by various experiments, overcome it, but very often, as in this case, neither the patient nor the doctor knows what the trouble is. I am convinced this patient would have died of inanition if kept in the hospital.

Bela Lugosi Is Amiable Man—Off the Screen

By TALBOT LAKE

BELA LUGOSI is at it again. Which means he is going around frightening children and a lot of big folks. Mr. Lugosi is the screen star who plays those Dracula and Frankenstein roles that bring gasps and sometimes shrieks from the audience.

Just recently he and his wife returned from England, where the actor made a picture in which he had a sympathetic part. Asked whether it dismayed him to appear so frightful in his American films, he replied that being golems was good business, so he had no reason to complain.

Lugosi, who is of Hungarian descent, says frankly, "It's a good business; give tips and invite the boys for a drink. If I wouldn't make such pictures—maybe trash—I couldn't do it."

He did enjoy playing the lovable role, however. "I am just opposite to all the roles I ever played before. I am a kindly derelict, am killing only about seven people, and everybody will love me!" Of course, money was not the chief reason for his return to America. He declared the British studios pay even better than those of Hollywood, but his desire to live here was too strong. Lugosi is a naturalized citizen, and extremely patriotic.

The man who makes your hair rise is anything but sinister looking off the screen. Exceedingly amiable and polite, he looks something like Paul Lukas, another Hungarian actor, but one who uses his own face for acting. Courtesy, in fact, is almost a fetish with Lugosi. One of the things he liked best about England was the large amount of courtesy he encountered there. He thinks there should be more of it in this country, because the non-rushing manner of the British seems to produce better brain work in the studios.

"They are rested people," he says. "That is why when they work they sometimes get great results." So, if you are too scared at the next Lugosi chain of horrors, just remember that he's really a pleasant fellow, with a kind disposition, a beautiful wife, and a desire to make money to continue a genial host.

Guide to Charm

Eye Massage Does Wonders To the Looks

By JACQUELINE HUNT

IT IS your eyes that give you personality, expressiveness, and mystery. But much of their beauty depends on the smoothness and firmness of the contours of the upper part of the face. A gentle, nightly massage of the areas around the eyes and from the eyebrows is essential for this smoothness and loveliness.

The skin should always be thoroughly cleansed before massage of any kind. Next smooth on a heavy coating of cream, toilet lanoline or warm olive oil. Use only the cushions of your fingers for the massage and do both eyes at the same time.

Begin on the upper lid close to the nose and, smoothing gently, but firmly, out to your temples. Let your fingertips do a fairy dance at the outer corners of the eyes where crowsfeet are likely to develop, then gently smooth under the eyes, inward toward the nose. Circle each eye in this way for at least fifteen times.

Now your fingers are ready for a more vigorous patting at the temples. Place the fingers of one hand firmly over the center of your forehead, and using the fingertips of the other hand tap briskly over the near-est temple. Repeat twenty times, then reverse the positions of the hands and pat the other temple.

Next using all of the fingers, mold the forehead firmly from the center outward to the temples, starting just over the eyebrows and gradually working up to the hairline.

When the molding is finished, pin a folded towel over your hair or put on a rubber cap. Attach hand spray or soak your washcloth in very cold water and pat or spray your face for two minutes. Dry the face with gentle upward strokes or pats. This is a convenient time to use a soothing, cleansing eye lotion.

If your muscles have already begun to sag or show little lines you should finish your treatment with an ice rub. Wrap a piece of ice in a cheesecloth. This is a cer of skin tonic and beginning near the nose, smooth the ice outward over the cheek to the temple. Pat here for a minute and repeat several times for each side.

Now use the ice to smooth the forehead from the hairline to the hairline in short, vertical strokes. Smooth from side to side and finally run the ice around the eyes three or four times. This treatment is an excellent one for preserving the youthful freshness of your face.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "I have a new position where even secretaries must live by time-clocks. We have a ten-minute rest period in the middle of the morning and again in the afternoon, with only a half-hour for lunch. Can you tell me how to dress and what kind of make-up to use to look well all day, since there is no time for renewing make-up or fussing with details at noon when I need it most?"—Worried.

Clothes that stay smart-looking are not so difficult to find now that the weather is getting cooler. Choose non-crushable silk crepes and tailored dresses of light wools in rather subdued but becoming colors. These can be made more attractive with white collars and cuffs or other lingerie touches, but be sure to change them every night so they are always strictly fresh.

Use a good powder base or liquid powder, a "permanent" rouge, and a lipstick that really stains rather than coats your lips. To use a liquid powder, cleanse your face thoroughly and pat with skin tonic. While still moist, pour a small amount of liquid powder into one hand and use the fingertips to apply it to a small area at a time. When thoroughly dry, go over your skin with clean, dry cotton to remove the excess powder. Carry this along with you to touch your nose before you go to lunch.

You should plan to use a part of your afternoon rest period for cleansing your skin and renewing your make-up. If you use a cream powder base all you will have to do is to moisten a piece of cotton with cold water and go over your skin to remove particles of grime and dust. Apply little fresh powder, give your lips a retouching and you will feel and look refreshed.

Outside Leaves Good

This fact cannot be repeated too often: That the green outside leaves of lettuce contain the most minerals and vitamins. The same applies to the outer leaves of cabbage.

New Leather Vogue

Down with silks and satins and on with leather. Kathleen Burke, film player, joins the crusade in this rust-colored suede sports outfit. The laced seams add nice detail to the outfit. The jacket is accented with a criss-cross trimming of henna suede things which match the turned-up turban of henna suede.

Milliners Going High Hat; Crowns Are Building Up

By IRENE VAIL

New York — It develops that crowns are ascending again, the newest and youngest of the high crowns being cone shape, a crown which sets nicely with the rolled brims, now one of the best hat fashions. Not all milliners have gone high hat, but enough of them have to make the rise and fall of the crown an issue. Many of them are full, tam-like affairs, such as the old Italian Masters loved to paint, and that they are being worn in portrait colors is consistent.

We have had, many different ways of attaining some degree of crown height this season, but the one that is having the most recent consideration is the cone-shaped crown, really a contrivance of the flower-pot silhouette. Talbot has adopted this line as an interesting expression of the small shape. It is developed in velvet, felt, or other fabric, with a twist or padded roll for the border edge. The cone-shaped crown is youthful, because it eliminates the heavy look of the tall crown that is wide at top. It frequently appears in a hat which is worn slightly off-face. It should have a definite appeal in a sleek outline for the younger girl, and may be draped down a little or otherwise manipulated for the woman.

Again, this modiste sponsored coiffures on gloves to match forward jutting afternoon hats with a fall of coq feathers at the back, or gloves which are trimmed with gold eborhorns or nailheads to match similar trimmings on black felts or velvet hats.

Large (and small) bubbles of iridescent clear material like glass, but softer, looking just like little soap bubbles, make delightful hair earrings, twisted strands for the hair or the neck, or fall in a cascade from a clip fastening to put at the front of a dress, in the new collection. The clear, slightly rainbow-tinted balls harmonize with practically any color of costume, but are especially effective on black or white.

Many coat dresses are unbelted, sometimes fastening over at the side with tied ends, sometimes confined by a jeweled ornament and sometimes merely buttoned.

Short Cuts

Did you know that cottage cheese is good for small children and that they generally like it, too?

Meat juice stains on table linen should be washed in clear lukewarm water first. Then launder the tablecloth in the usual way.

Breakfast At Campfire Is A Party Idea

By WILSON

GUESTS in the city or young people could be delighted to be entertained at an early morning picnic breakfast. Make a campfire on a hillside as well as a romantic and early rising is guaranteed to arouse eager appetites. Have the party in your back yard. If it is more convenient, or take your guests to a selected spot in the woods.

Have flat stones arranged for a fireplace and gather your firewood the day before. The necessary skillet, enamel or paper plates, coffee cups, and the food can be gotten together the night before, so that once you arrive on the spot you can put your coffee to boiling and the savory smells of cooking food will soon assail your guests.

Of course, every guest does his bit. If one expert is assigned to the job of frying flapjacks or hamburgers, others will lay the cloth or table and arrange the other food. Or you may pass out the little individual broilers or forked green sticks so that each guest can cook his own food. You will find them a willing group.

Here are recipes that are especially good for the campfire breakfast.

CAMPFIRE BREAKFASTS
Prepared Cereal with Cream and Blueberries or Peaches
Fried Canadian Bacon and Eggs
Flapjacks Maple Syrup
Coffee

Chilled Fruit Juice
Lamb Steaks or Small Sausages
Toasted Rolls or Biscuits
Mustard Relish
Blueberry Cake Coffee

Fried Biscuits

This dough can be prepared before you leave home. Sift together 3 times, 2 cups bread flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Cut in 2 rounded tablespoons shortening and add 3/4 cup milk (about) to make a soft dough. Pat with the tips of the fingers to 1/2 inch thickness and cut into rounds. Place on a very hot, greased frying pan move to a less hot place and cook until brown on one side. Turn and finish cooking. This makes 14 biscuits. Serve dripping with butter and pass thick strained honey with them.

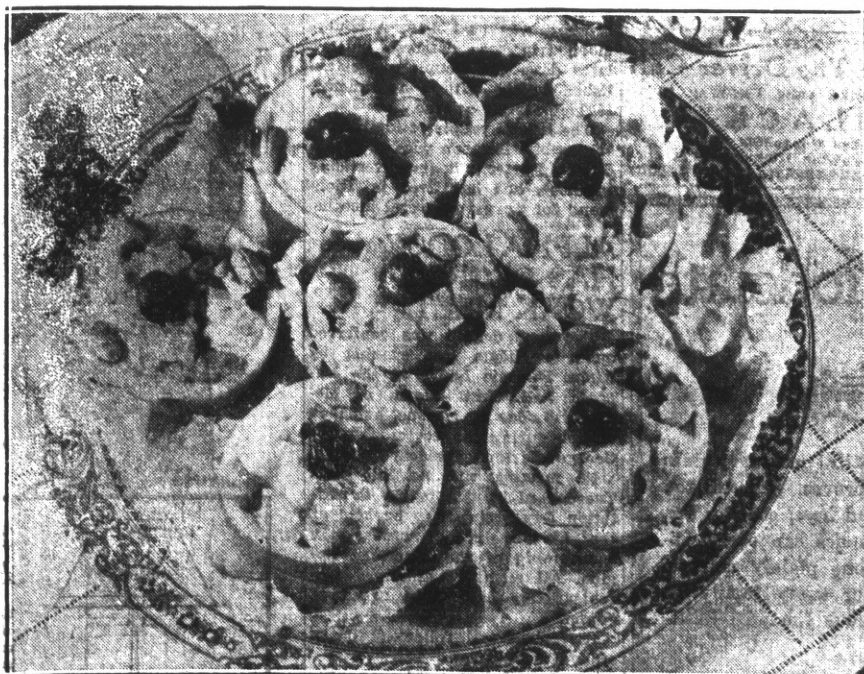

Toasted Hamburger Rolls
Buy large, flat, round rolls and 2 pounds freshly ground steak. Season the meat well with salt, pepper and grated onion and make into loosely packed cakes about the size of the rolls and very thin. Place a big lump of butter in the skillet and when it has melted add the meat patties and cook them quickly, taking care the butter doesn't scorch. When the meat cakes are brown on both sides, brown the split rolls in butter and put the halves together with the hamburger between. Sliced tomatoes make a good accompaniment. Two pounds meat will make about 16 cakes.

Lamb Steaks
Have half inch slices of lamb cut from the leg, rub them well with salt and pepper and cut into pieces the right size for individual servings. Broil over an open fire in individual broilers or an old-fashioned toaster. Serve sizzling hot on buttered rolls or from a napkin.

Coffee

Boiled coffee calls for 2 heaping tablespoons ground coffee for each 2 cups water. Add 2 tablespoons beaten egg. Mix the egg and coffee then add the cold water and bring slowly to the boiling point, stirring down occasionally. Remove from the fire, add 1/4 cup cold water and let set 3 or 4 minutes, then it is ready to pour.

PLEASANT TO SEE AND EAT

ORANGE BASKET SALAD: Three large oranges, one cup pineapple, diced, one-half cup cashew nuts, finely chopped, one-quarter cup mayonnaise. Cut oranges in half and carefully remove the sections, free from membrane, if possible. Use the halves of the oranges for the baskets. Blend orange sections, pineapple, and nut meats with mayonnaise. Fill each orange shell with the mixture. Garnish each with a red cherry. Serve on crisp lettuce.

A Claim Is Made That the Farm Is Solution for Old Age Security

By MARIAN MAY'S MARTIN

IS THE farm the solution of the old age security problem? Farmers will tell you that it isn't, yet there are many economists who insist otherwise. So what?

It is most certainly not given to us all to be farmers—I, for one, praise heaven for that. It certainly isn't reasonable to assume that a city-bred man, or a small town one either, can become a farmer by the simple process of acquiring a farm. And don't think that it isn't a simple process. Farmers may be had for the asking in many communities, the asking and a little matter of working the farm and assuming all the liens already on it. Here's a case in point:

Doesn't Feel at Home In Her Own House

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

THE worst punishment for Elsie is to have to remain in the house. She dashes in for her meals or when called home for some other reason, and then dashes right out again. If detained, she becomes irritable.

Elsie's mother, naturally, does not like it. She keeps asking, "Why can't you stay at home once in a while? Why are you so anxious to get away to other people's houses? Don't you ever think of coming in just for the sake of being home?"

For answer Elsie generally makes a face. How should she know why she likes to get away from the house? All she knows is that she likes to do it.

Mother, to be sure, has a right to know why Elsie prefers other houses. She will find the answer in the other houses. For that's where the attraction for Elsie lies, and in the fact that she can have fun there.

It is fun to be at home when you can enjoy yourself. This is not possible where the parents themselves engage in endless quarrels. Nor is there room for fun in a child's home if parents fuss at him perpetually. Many parents have the habit without knowing it. For example, the above questions put to Elsie by her mother show evidence of fault finding, and yet Elsie's mother may believe herself to be innocent of this fault.

If an atmosphere is charged with unpleasantness or too restricted, a child wants to get away from it. Many parents provide shelter for children, but not a home. Here is a place where children feel free to come and go and bring their friends, a place where they can be themselves, laugh, sing, play, relax.

Remember: A child wants to get away when he does not feel "at home" in his own house. Try treating him more like a guest with respect to privileges. Make him feel welcome, and he will want to stay at home more.

2 cups water. Add 2 tablespoons beaten egg. Mix the egg and coffee then add the cold water and bring slowly to the boiling point, stirring down occasionally. Remove from the fire, add 1/4 cup cold water and let set 3 or 4 minutes, then it is ready to pour.

Entitled to Dream

Each is entitled to his dream. May yours come true. Gladly publish your letter, more because it shows the courage of conviction; than that I believe the farm is the solution of everyone's problem. For I am afraid I don't.

With everyone on a farm of his own, where would you sell your eggs and vegetables? And if you did sell them, I am afraid it would be for much less even than the price of a song.

Were I going to take on a side line I am sure it could not be anything as all-absorbing and exacting as a farm. It seems to me to be the last thing one could take lightly or as a part-time pastime. I don't happen to be a farm product, but I do happen to have been on some big farms—great wheat farms in Canada and dairy farms in upper New York State—so I have no illusions about a farmer's life being an easy one—or the life of a farmer's wife one to be envied unless one likes hard work and plenty of it.

An alarm clock and a time clock are pretty much as exacting and as exasperating one as the other.

Not So Independent

The life of an independent farmer sounds rosy until one tries to find the independent farmer and learns that there "just ain't no such animal." The demands that are made by livestock, not to mention the soil itself, are just as insistent as other businesses. In fact, any well regulated business might be able to exist without attention for twenty-four hours, which is more time than a farmer is ever allotted.

Without wishing to discourage you, I would really like to know by what line of reasoning you arrived at the conclusion that a man who had failed, to the point of foreclosure, could suddenly succeed. I suppose the answer is that money was needed for equipment of one kind and another, and I admit that under good executive management, plus capital, the man who does the actual work may be able to put the land on a paying basis.

It sounds like a working plan, but one must not discount the human question. Every piece of machinery, and every man, woman, and child has to synchronize in order to make the dream come true, and that's expecting a good deal.

I should be afraid of such a conflict of interests. Your farmer has no outside interest to interfere, but how about you and your husband? Isn't the job going to suffer? To begin with, you are bound to consider it as a temporary measure, and that's a bad angle in itself. You are going to have only half a mind to give it, and that's not enough. Any good job deserves more than a divided attention. If the job goes, the farm goes, too—maybe not immediately, but ultimately. Or am I wrong?
